Or, were they?

The building and the girls worked as one.
Each reflected the other,
It was home;
Somewhere they belonged.
Their friends, their labors, their triumphs,
All lived in the halls,
And rooms of the building,
Their "home".

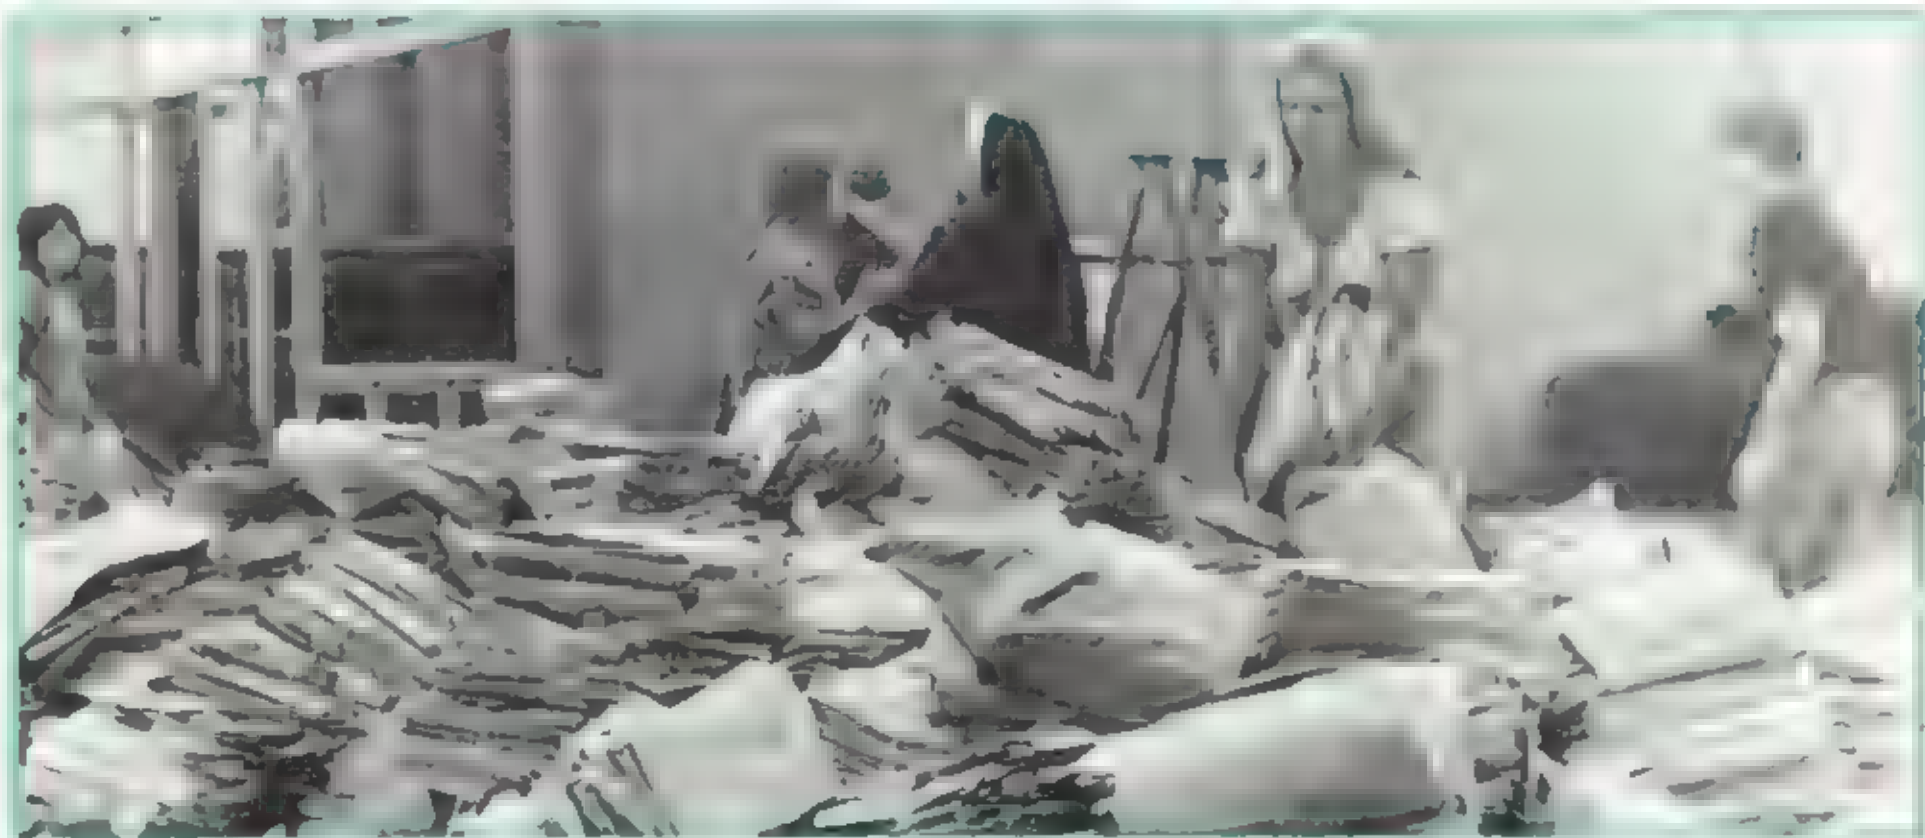

The faces,
The events,
The memories,
Reflections of a moment

Gone by,
Forever lost
In time.

"After all, its
What we've done
That makes us What we are."

— Jim Croce

“. . . What we see now is like The dim image in a mirror.”
— St. Paul

But if we peer long enough into
That mirror, that reflection
Will be one of what we want To be.

"Then we shall See Face to face"
— St. Paul

Face to face
With Ourselves.

Face to face
With our creator.

From the Day we begin,
To the day we end,
We experience a Oneness, a unity.

Yet,
Not at the sacrifice
Of our individuality,
Our uniqueness.

For alone we come Into this world of Notre Dame, and alone
Will be our departure
From it.

But when We look back, and Reflect on a time Remembered, we Will realize that . . .

"The moment of maturity
Came when our mirrors Turned into windows."

Searching for inspiration, opening our minds to the ideas and concepts most basic to our Catholic faith is the aim in N.D.'s theology courses this year. For freshman and sophomores religion classes provided the opportunity for better understanding of the sacraments and other doctrinal truths that are fundamental to a good Christian life. Sophomore and freshman classes took place during period two, five days during our semi-modular six day schedule. Junior-senior theology afforded these levels a chance to mix during the twenty-two day cycle used this school year. These classes branched off into the deeper questions facing the young Christian woman of today such as morality, and a personal response to Jesus Christ, and many other topics. In the mixed sessions, the two class levels were able to open their lines of communication and draw a greater understanding of each other. This made for a more unified spirit amongst themselves. Also included were the required ecumenism course for juniors. Through ecumenism our juniors learned the basic beliefs and gained new insights from our fellow Christian religions. The marriage course, required for seniors, was a detailed study of different aspects of the nuptial state of life. Some guidelines were also offered for rearing a family. The junior-senior religion classes met during the first period five days out of six

Rare amporhous solids, unique rock formations and theories of light, sound and mo- tion summon minds geared to scientific investigation. Physics explored base relationships through laboratory experiments concerning mechanics, heat, sound, light, and electricity. Investigative lab sessions were spent examining relationships ranging from those between force and momentum to the density of a material and the refraction of light. Physics attracted students with a strong sense of science who enjoyed the vigorous mental gymnastics the course demanded

Chemistry students, armed with indispensable slide rules and periodic charts, tackled problems ranging from equations like $H_2SO_4 + Zn \rightarrow H_2 \uparrow + ZnSO_4$, to the law of definite proportions. Lab sessions involved girls in specific investigations such as the production of oxygen through water displacement, and the determining of the empirical formula of copper sulfide. As the year progressed, those once insurmountable chemical bonds and structural formulas became second nature to the dedicated chemistry student

Students participating in earth science probed the natural world through investigative processes. Geology, astronomy, meteorology, and oceanography were divided into quarterly topics so that an in-depth and thorough study of each science could be pursued. Varied projects included the construction of manders, the charting of area weather conditions, and the study of the effects of erosion. Out of knowledge gained, came an awareness and appreciation of man's environment

Physiology sweeps students into the complex yet fascinating world of the human body. Students earnestly explore structure and function of the body through the study of various body systems. A major accomplishment of the year was the mastering of the intricate parts of the human skeleton

Biology combined laboratory investigation with knowledge gained from textbooks. Investigative processes included the study of plant and animal cell structures, the identification of different blood cells, and the regeneration of planaria-all accomplished with the aid of the microscope

Freshman, when not conditioning their bodies in gym were becoming acquainted with the ideas of healthful living, a course which stressed that healthful living involves not only the physical aspect of the body, but also the mental and emotional health as well

Regardless of whether the science involved an indepth study of mitosis, the discovery of a blood type, or a general study of healthful living, each student met and overcame challenges encountered

Latin classes although not large, still draw girls to the ancient language of the medieval scholars and philosophers Latin — the basis for many modern languages is still a part of the curriculum here at Notre Dame. Sister Mary Immaculate an authority with many books to her credit and a PhD guides Latin students through the maze of roots, translations, and tests. Even though only a few students choose the course, Latin is still an important part of some N D. students' studies

What can you say about a course in which one finds the Rhine River, the Berlin Wall and Sister Mary Llaura? The best description would probably be German I, II, III, IV. Correct pronunciation and an excellent memory were two special requirements for every German student. Listening exercises, dialogues, and written assignments comprised a large part of a hard-working student's homework. Classroom practice and frequent tests kept every girl on her toes and thinking all the time. For practice and skill, students also engaged in the reading and writing of German poetry and other forms of literature. As always, translation of these forms was a popular learning process too

Above left Group pronunciation practice seems to be a pleasure for most of Sister Llaura's German I class. Below left Testing their memories, Beth (Elisabeth) Schaublin, and Therese (Monika) Dreyer use dialogue illustration cards to give them a hint. Above right the only German IV scholar, Pat Weber, reads her translation of Heinrich Heine's famous poem "Die Lorelei"

Where else could one find shades of Paris and Marsailles, De Gaulle and Les Miserables? Why the one and only French department of Notre Dame, of course Sister Mary Elayne, and Sister Mary Teresa directed girls interested in this melodic Romance language. Four levels of french were offered this year. Freshman to seniors involved themselves daily in conjugation, recitation, and sometimes frustration, in their classes. A special treat for some fourth year students was a trip to France last summer; There they improved and increased their fluency and knowledge of the language. Also they learned about French culture, customs, and people. This year, in addition to textbooks and exercise workbooks, students were able to utilize a new source, a book of readings and questions that enabled the students to gain a broader comprehension in the reading and writing of the French language.

Above left French I students Lynne Willis and June Wesnieski play a game that helps them increase their fluency and vocabulary knowledge. "The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain." This year no rain fell on N.D.'s Spanish department. Usually, with Mrs.

Madonna Mallet leading her students through the language of Picasso, Don Quixote, and Queen Isabella, our Spanish-learning girls had few problems. The most popular language among N.D. pupils, Spanish offered a little something for everybody. Whether it was a freshman stuttering over her first dialogue or a second-year student concentrating on a unit test and perhaps some third and fourth year scholars in song and dance, Spanish was the class to be in. Use of the listening lab, Room 101, played a vital part in the perfection of pronunciation, reading, and writing skills for all Spanish students. Translations and extra readings provided insight for all girls into the culture and customs of the Spanish people even a kindergarten party complete with Indian headbands — the social studies department of N.D.A., really? Ethnic studies explored the history and culture of the different ethnic groups in our nation. Civics class explained our constitution and governmental systems, and helped plan the debate between congressional candidates Mr Finkbeiner and a representative of Congressman Ashely. As for the kindergarten party, that was a project of the psychology class — a semester course for seniors who were interested in the psyche man and the world around him

Did you see some frenzied-looking girls dashing up to room 314, worrying about headline counts, layout paper and cropping pictures? Well, then, you know the girls of the 74-75 Regina staff. One business manager, two photographers, and six talented writers put together a truly unified effort to produce the yearbook.

With the expert guidance of Sister Mary Carolanne, the 75 staff attempted to continue the "Regina" tradition of excellence especially in this our 20th edition.

First-year journalism — a pre-requisite for yearbook — gave girls first-hand experience in newspaper-type journalism and other media-communication besides the actual instructional methods for putting a yearbook together.

Flowing strokes from a No. 3 brush, the click of a loom, wood-shavings falling to the floor. Where else could all these elements be found? The N.D.A. Art Room, of course! The four-year program and the two year basic art courses were the vents for the more artistically gifted members of the student body. Emphasis on history and theory plus the girls' own creativity were included in the regular program, which is considered one of the finest in our area. Basic art placed more stress on imagination and design for those girls who chose this class. Sister Mary Carmela, Sister Mary Magdala, and Sister Mary Genevera directed the activities of these future Rembrandts, Picassos, and Monets. Their instruction and advice gave the students guidelines for their projects as the year progressed. Room 202 is the residence of all the hard work and talent of these dedicated students

Looking for Great Books of the Western World, or some extra special research for an American studies or history project, or maybe even an answer to a question left over from religion class?

Students who found themselves faced with such perplexing problems could find help in the library and the two resource centers. The library, under the management of Sister Mary Chryossotom and Sister Mary Clarette, was a storehouse of treasure for the student searching for the source that would win that golden A. Stacks of specialized, informative, and fictional books, as well as magazines for current events packed the room. When in the neighborhood of 102, whether faced with psychology or English research paper, or just interested in a leisurely browse through the paperbacks, check the library.

The history and religion resource centers, under the guidance of Sister Mary Antoni and Sister Mary Louisa, provided students with knowledge over and above that required by ordinary assignments. Sister Mary Loisann, head of the reading department, helped equip girls with skills necessary to high school study and research.

Above left Chris Omenga uses the globe to assist her in her homework. Above right Trying to improve her reading abilities Sherry Henzler takes advantage of Sister Loisann's reading class. Below right The history resource center aids Eunice Seeman, Susan Uturp, and Mary Dennis.

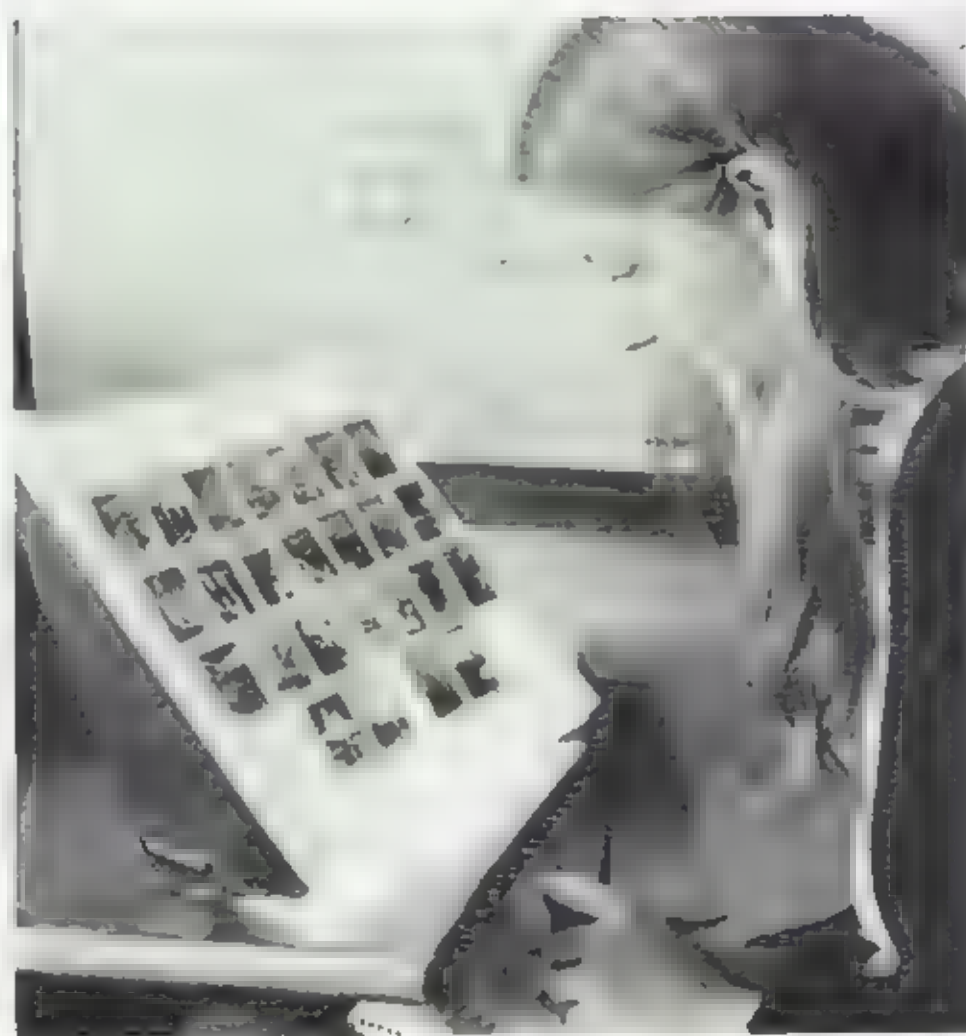

Spirits of 19th century orator, William Jennings Bryan, and the modern-day mime, Marcel Marceau are alive and well in speech room 106 where Notre Dame's up-and-coming actresses and orators realize their dreams. Expressive speech, taught by Sister Mary Llaura, beckoned to girls interested in acting and pantomime and with a flair for drama and its related modes of expression. Students worked toward the perfection of expression and characterization through improvisations, scenes, mime, and play performances. They also undertook the serious study of history of the drama, basic theory of drama, and the basic elements of production.

Public speaking offered a variety of speech experiences for the girl interested in improving her method of public presentation. Sister Mary Carolanne stressed the necessity of logical thought, direct eye contact, and sharp articulate speech. Articulation was achieved through weekly recording sessions where girls practiced vowel and phonetic sounds. A major part of the course was the actual preparation and delivery of over fourteen different types of public address by the individual student. Group interaction included choral speaking and discussion, with debate and parliamentary procedure highlighting the culmination of the course.

Sweet soothing sopranos, and deep, mellow altos blending in perfect harmony once again fill the air as the Notre Dame

Chorus completed a year of freshman to senior vocalizing. Two classes: freshman chorus and advanced chorus, under the careful guidance of Sister Mary Krista, practiced long and hard to achieve musical perfection. Christmas and Spring concerts, the standard agenda every year for the chorus students, were given for students, their families and the general public. Time, energy, and special co-ordination were the key elements demanded on the part of every student involved in the productions, which were well attended and very successful. An instrumental program under the direction of Sister Mary Helaine added to the musical atmosphere of the choral room. Violins, flutes and other instruments gave special accompaniment to the chorus and paved the way for the revival of the Notre Dame orchestra

If your interest turns to square roots, quadratic equations, theorems and parallelograms, then the place for you was the math department here at the Academy. The required pre-algebra and algebra for freshmen and geometry for sophomores filled these math students' minds and notebooks with postulates, thought problems, and occasional headaches. For girls who wished to further their mathematical knowledge, intermediate and advanced algebra were offered as a compliment to the chemistry course; for the seniors, introduction to analysis afforded them the opportunity to complete a four-year math major as preparation for college. This year, as always, visual equipment and various classroom aids such as solid geometric figures, magnetic number lines and the like, helped students gain a better understanding of their particular math class

business department which offered a wide and diverse range of courses from the traditional curls and swirls of shorthand to the more modern techniques of data processing. For freshmen and sophomores interested in gaining an early background in business skills studied general business, while upperclassmen found challenge in shorthand, accounting, consumer economics and data processing. Office practice provided an actual atmosphere as future secretaries worked on simulated projects. Again this year, Sister Mary Jon stressed the idea of individual study and development of skills so necessary for success in the business world

Enticing aromas of things to come, singing Singers and studies of family relationships, child development, parenthood were all a part of home economic courses this year. Up and coming courturieres were challenged with the principles of wardrobe planning and fabric selection as well as the skill-filled mechanics so important to the art of sewing. Frustrations over misplaced darts, crooked zippers and uneven hems were replaced with feelings of pride and accomplishment when that first skirt or dress was completed Girls desiring development of their culinary skills found fulfillment under the guidance of Sister Mary Margret Anne. Many areas of food and nutrition were studied, from the relationship of diet to health, to meal planning and budgeting. The favorite was the actual preparation and consumption of the various delectable delights.

Family living, offered to seniors only, opened the door to the not so distant future. Through studies ranging from parenthood and child psychology to home furnishings and budgeting, an awareness of what is expected of a girl as she becomes a wife and mother was created. Girls realized that home economics was no longer a subject for the marriage minded girl, but for the girl desiring a practical knowledge to round out her education

The mystique of ancient Greek mythology, basic grammar, and comprehensive studies of the short story, the play, and poetry reigned in underclass English this year

Grammar strove for a broad but basic understanding of the mechanics so important for intelligent, articulate expression, while writing courses applied these mechanics to the development of logical, well organized paragraphs. Greek mythology took underclassmen into the world of Zeus, strange gods, and the legendary hero, Hercules. Other literary explorations looked into the creative expressions of Faulkner, Wouke, and Sandburg

Upperclassmen found challenge in courses geared towards the development of individual interests, talents, and skills. Survey of American Literature explored the works of America's greatest — from the flowing, delicate lines of Dickinson to the transcendental wisdoms of Henry David Thoreau. Survey of British literature focused on the great works of the English masters, and encouraged the student to take a deeper, more appreciative look at the development of English literature. Junior-senior writing courses involved the toil necessary for the assembling of a term paper worthy of that coveted A. For others the development of individual creative technique was foremost. Together, required and optional courses provided girls of all levels with an understanding and appreciation of the realm of language and literature

Notre Dame Sisters mark Century of coming to USA with celebration of Holy Mass at Rosary cathedral, September 8. Sisters —

nearly 400 of them — moved in procession from Cathedral hall down the walk toward Collingwood Avenue and into the cathedral's center aisle which was flanked by relatives and friends. A commentary before Mass reviewed historic moments of the 125 year-old community which came to America in 1874 as exiles of Bismarck's Kulturkampf in Germany, and which took root and flourished under the red, white and blue. The Rt. Rev. John Harrington recalled that history also in his homily which praised the Sisters and thanked them for their work, especially in Catholic education in the Diocese of Toledo. Later, at Notre Dame Academy, Sister Mary Arthur, Provincial Superior, thanked the people of Toledo and of the Toledo Diocese for their loyalty through these one hundred years. A choir of Sisters sang the credo of the Sisters of Notre Dame in a parody to "I Believe." The Sisters celebrated once more at Notre Dame Academy on September 15 with members of their immediate families. NDA girls attended the cathedral celebration and assisted with serving lunch to the Sisters' relatives on the family day.

Cindy Spinnazze, Kathy Kilman, Mary Beth Beazley, and Jan Clark, old timers at NDA, gave her a rough time.

On Sept. 5, 1974, a cast of 40 greets school in one of the best opening assemblies yet. The cast very artfully depicted the frequent mistakes and blunders of freshmen, the so-called "superiority" of the upperclassmen and the partial awareness of the veteran sophomores. The scenes included those of the lunch time rushes, the library draped in forced silence, the current and updated excuses for those who wished to pass up gym activities, and the announcements that turn into hilarious messages rarely conveying the true thoughts Seniors, juniors, and sophomores worked on the assembly, meeting several weeks before the beginning of school to get things rolling so that the entire school, including teachers and freshmen, as well as "oldster" students, felt welcome after a long summer vacation.

Daughters create swingin' time with their fathers at the dance given especially for all NDA girls and beloved dads only on the evening of Oct. 18 from 6:30-11:00 p.m. Previous to the actual dancing, they enjoyed dinner in Notre Dame's dining hall. This time gave the girls and their fathers an opportunity to renew acquaintances with the Sisters and to meet couples who were new to them. Various dances included the waltz, polka, square dances and any other dance dad could execute. Square dances brought together four usually and equally confused couples keeping time to the music and the caller. The turnout was fantastic. Over 300 people crowded the dance floor.

Christmas Dance unites juniors and seniors as "Christmas Belles and Beaux" enchant the evening of December 20 in the auditorium of Notre Dame Academy. The dance proved successful as bells and bows transformed the plain gym into a beautiful Christmas scene. Highlights of the dance included the choosing of the queen, Mary Dunne. Chosen to grace Mary's court were junior attendants, Carol Gerken and Mary Beth Lavey; and senior attendants, Judi Menk, Cindy Buganski, and Diane Comes. A touch of excitement sprouted when the talented band, "Syngery" expressed themselves as they played their numbers with ease. Refreshments were served in the dining hall for those who wished to take a break and enjoy their date's company. The Christmas dance was well attended by over seventy-five couples. This special dance will linger long in memories of participants

Dec. 12 arrives; class of '76 receive unifying bond, the tradi- tional NDA ring When the girls and their parents were invited by formal invitation, and participated in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in the auditorium. Sister Marv Patricie then gave a short speech explaining the significance of the crest, while displaying the tray of brightly sparkling rings. She and Sister Marv Thomasita called the girls up and presented to them carnations and their rings with each of their initials engraved on the band. The ring pledge and the singing of the traditional song, the "Alma Mater" climaxed the ceremony.

Ghosts, witches, goblins haunt NDA as the great pumpkin appears on the bewitching evening of Oct. 30. This night was a speciality for the NDA girls as each appeared in some wild, exotic, crazy costume to represent that time of year. The Halloween party was held in the artistically decorated school auditorium which was filled with games and fun for everyone. Sponsored by student council, the lively party lasted from 7:00-9:00 p.m. Refreshments such as popcorn, carmel apples, candy, brownies and other goodies awaited all party-goers in NDA's dining hall. To help set the mood for this special occasion, a pumpkin carving contest for each homeroom resulted in creative ideas for decorating and displaying each pumpkin. Each homeroom group carved their pumpkin according to their own desires as dictated by each board of observers. After the party, co-operative partying ghosts and goblins sponsored a clean-up to put gym and dining hall ship-shape for the following day

Mission fair strikes it rich as sophs show their originality, creativity, pluck to students of NDA and to the public

This exciting event was held in the school auditorium and lobby D last March. Such activities as fish pond, spinning wheel bets, and the horse race were among a few of the fun-filled games for both young and old alike. There were loads of excitement and bursts of laughter throughout the jammed halls of NDA. Happiness reigned among thankful students as a result of a school-day afternoon free from books and homework. Active Active sophomores forfeited hours getting the mission fair presentable for the generous purpose of raising funds for the missions. The result of the fair was a large sum of money sent to the missions office earmarked for New Guinea. Different from other years, six Sisters in training from New Guinea were present for this fair which supports their home mission. St. Lucy's Day honors seniors on December 13 as they receive crowns from the juniors, carnations with senior colors from sophs, and candy in champagne glasses from the frosh. St. Lucy's day has been a tradition at N.D.A. for many years honoring the senior class. The seniors enjoyed and appreciated all the attention they received from the student body. December 13 proved to be very exciting as all seniors were in high spirits. This day, especially devoted to the seniors, is based upon a French custom of honoring the eldest daughter in the family on St. Lucy's Day.

No paper shortage prevails at NDA! Volunteers beam as enthusiastic representatives of NDA find an abundance of paper. They gathered at NDA's parking lot on the weekend of Oct. 11, 12, 13. The result of typing, weighing, loading, and unloading tons of paper was three fully stacked semis. Helpful Sisters acted as "foremen" and worked the adding machine to total class amounts. Simultaneously, all four classes formally challenged each other to competition. In the final results, seniors achieved over 40,000 lbs.; juniors, 30,000 lbs.; sophs and frosh were close behind. Everyone's cooperation was fantastic on the overall, and it could not really be stated that any contenders lost the battle. NDA received over $1,000.00 to provide for school furniture. Never before has NDA proved so successful in a paper drive. Without support of hard, interested workers, there would have been a great loss of profit for the school as well as in recycled papers.

NDA girls experience the unexperienced as involvement characterizes their visit to Washington, D.C. through Oct. 23, 24,25. From arrival at the Washington National Airport at 9:00 a.m. Wednesday, October 23, until 8:00 p.m. Friday, October 25, the girls were on the run having fun. Seventy-two girls toured everything from Mt. Vernon to Scholl's cafeteria, excluding the Washington monument which was closed for cleaning. Some high-lights of the tours were the White House, Annapolis, the movie, "That's Entertainment," at the uptown theatre, and the dinner at Scholl's. The girls stayed at the Hospitality House in Arlington, Virginia. Before the excursion to Detroit Metro Airport, juniors bade seniors farewell with care packages and other goodies. There was an inner excitement among the girls before their first step to the bus and their final step from the D.C. 707 jet liner at the end of the journey "Meet Me In St. Louis" proves a triumph for NDA seniors as the play produces excitement during the weekend of January 11,12. The play selected by Notre Dame seniors centered around a St. Louis family around the turn of the century. The characters ranged from the sweet shy neighbor to the high and mighty boss of Mr. Smith. All of the people involved with this play willingly devoted hard, long hours to produce the best of presentations. Although there was merriment behind the scenes, once on the stage, the performance provided thorough enjoyment through its near-perfection. Under the careful direction of Sister Mary Llaura, assisted by Mary Jean Culpert, student directress, the cold script was transformed into one of the most successful and well-attended in the auditorium of NDA. The cast included "actors" from Holy Spirit, St. Francis de Sales and "actresses" from Notre Dame. Mr. Peter, the master of many, gains admiration of Notre Dame Academy girls for his service of 37 years as the chief engineer and maintenance director, working from the bottom of old NDA building to the top of the new NDA building. Mr. Peter was born April 10, 1907 in Germany and went to school there up to 1930. He came to the United States, receiving his citizenship papers in 1936. He spent four years in the US army only to fight his homeland, a fact which proved a hardship but which also proved a test of his patriotism. He began working at the Provincial House where he became a Ladyfield bus driver. Many parents remember him from their childhood. Mr. Peter, after the war, worked at the old NDA building, running errands for the 104 Sisters there then. "The old NDA proved economical," said Mr. Peter, "but the change to the new NDA brought circumstances which were more efficient and less difficult." He educated himself in the field of mechanics, being naturally inclined to such work as plumbing, electricity, ground keeping, and boiler operation. Mr. Peter retired last summer, teaching Mr. Charles Resch how to take over. The experienced Mr. Peter has remained faithful to NDA, returning from time to time to see that all is going well.

Student Council and Senior Rep- resentative leadership characterizes an interest in the development of unity between NDA girls. Energetic officers continued hard work and planning throughout the year to sponsor such activities as paper drives, dances, assemblies, parties. Student Council officers offered services to the faculty, administration, and kept the student body involved. They have devoted themselves to NDA for the sole purpose of unifying bonds between the girls. Following tradition in proposing a theme for the year, Student Council officers selected "All for the Best" which fit appropriately to the loyalty and purpose of NDA functions in relation to the girls and their school. Senior reps were selected from each senior homeroom to express leadership in the course of the year for homeroom functions. Each rep. has taken care that homeroom activities, matters of importance, problems have been reported to the students and advisors. Both the officers and reps have carried out their responsibilities with the true spirit of willingness.

in their graduation exercises on Sunday, June 2, 1974. Parents, relatives and friends looked on as the seniors marched to the tune of "Pomp and Circumstance" and received their diplomas. "Lay me on an anvil, O God Beat me and hammer me into a crowbar.
Let me pry loose old walls.
Let me lift and loosen old foundations

Lay me on an anvil, O God Beat me and hammer me into a steel spike.
Drive me into the girders that hold a skyscraper together.
Take red-hot rivets and fasten me into the central girders.
Let me be the great nail holding a skyscraper through blue nights into white stars "

— Carl Sandburg

Let me make a difference, let my actions contribute to a better world, but never let me forget the friends I have made, or the good times I have known lest I become a machine and not a person.

[illegible]

Denise,

Well finally we made it through another year, and I can't believe it. I'm telling ya to watch Mike with a close eye, and be extra careful when you are with him. He became real close this year, and this summer we will have a lot. Try to behave yourself, remember your will power, remember also that you are a Notre Dame girl. Take pride in that.

Denise what happened after prom, don't let it EVER happen again. Stay cool this summer, don't do anything I wouldn't do. See ya,

Love ya
Linda,

Denise!
I'm working on a guy who's name is that.
I'm a good summer.
Michelle

Denise,
I don't know if I like arguing you.
But,
I guess I don't know what to write - that's why
I don't like it!
Get it, really,
just taking it easy!
Love ya!
